

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5 In a method and circuit for monitoring an oscillator in a medical implant, a physiological parameter is obtained from a subject in whom the medical implant is implanted and an electric signal containing a time component, is generated based on the physiological parameter. The functioning of the oscillator is monitored using this electric signal to identify if the functioning of the oscillator deviates from a specified functioning of the oscillator.